About The Home

By Frances Dell

Most men realize the importance of having a legal will to protect the interests of their family in case of death. However, few wives think it is necessary for them to have a will. If the wife owns property in her name, it is just as important for her to make a will as it is for a man.

"Catastrophe" or "deathbed" wills are sometimes better than no will at all, but often such hastily prepared wills are not made in legally acceptable form.

It would be wise to look into "joint tenancy" or joint ownership. Many couples acquire all of their property as joint owners, so that when one does, full ownership will pass to the other. This is wise in regard to items such as the family home and certain bank accounts. There are many techical legal questions surrounding the validity of joint tenancies, and in some states the right of ownership by the survivor is abolished by statute.

Have you provided a "guardian of the persons" for your children in case both you and your husband should meet death in an accident? You should do this at once. In some cases where this has not been taken care of, the children are turned over to the last person on earth the parents would want to bring them up.

When a tragic situation like the above-mentioned comes up, the court would try to do the right thing, but no matter how fair a judge is, he cannot do your job. He is not in the position to understand the personalities and natures of your children and of the relatives who might be involved.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Mr. Editor:

I would like to commend you also for reference you made to Bibles in your front page column in a recent issue of The Times-Virginian. J. Edgar Hoover gives a strong statement: "Today more than ever before we need to bring people closer to the Bible and the eternal lessons it teaches. Throughout the entire earth powerful atheistic forces are striving to destroy every form of worship of God. The philosophy of materialism is being substituted for the teachings of Christ; and books on secularism are taking the place of the Sacred Word. A spiritual renaissance is needed in our day; and the key to such a renaissance is the Bible." The Bible is still the best seller on any bookstand in our land. Dr. Billy Graham urges that "Every person should have a Bible in the language in which he prays." Your reference was exceedingly timely and appropriate, since during the Thanksgiving and Christmas season the American Bible Society annually promotes the daily Bible reading. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz has highly congratulated the Society: "The remarkable accomplishment of the American Bible Society in distributing Bibles for 142 years has in my opinion contributed most effectively to the spiritual quality of the American public and of peoples of other lands."

With every person owning either a portion or the whole Bible in any language, dialect, version or translation, the impact of daily reading of the Word could be of inestimable effectiveness both individually and collectively throughout our county, state, nation and the world. The Bible is "The Book" of our cherished Christian faith. It is not a fetish, like a rabit's foot, to ward off danger. It is not a charm to prevent misfortune. It is not an oracle, to consult for hidden and occult meanings. The Bible is the amazing record of God's providential dealings with His creation, and of man's spiritual experience in seeking and striving to do the Heavenly Father's Will. It is a lamp to illumine every step of our pilgrim way, and a light to shine upon our pathway through life's circuitous journey.

Again, Mr. Editor, as a minister of the community, may I heartily thank you for calling attention to the Bible and add my wishes with another minister of our community that these pre-Christmas days be opportunities for real searching and sincere study of 'God's Word.'

Sincerely yours,
Richard A. Bergdoll,
Minister of Memorial Methodist Church and President of Appomattox Ministerial Association.

COMMENT ON SPORTS

By Pete Fritchie

Washington.- Iowa and LSU are mighty powers on the football scene today along with Auburn and several others and two good games that would be good to see, November 15th and 22nd, would include Iowa-Ohio State, and Iowa - Notre Dame.

Auburn runs into Georgia, Wake Forest and Alabama on the last three weeks of its schedule, beginning on the 15th. LSU must get by Mississippi State and Tulane — and this should be relatively simple — on the 15th and 22nd.

It now appears that Army will be favored over Navy for their big scrap in Philadelphia, although this is one of those games where anything can happen, and does. But it looks like this year's Keydet eleven will not be quite as futile in moving the ball, at least.

These are all games it would be good to see.

Meanwhile the debate over the after-touchdown points continues. Most of the smart coaches are going for the one-point, via a kick, most of the time — unless they need two badly late in the game, or can't tie with one, etc.

Most of the coaches still grumble about the rule — say it should be changed back to what it was in 1957. Though there shouldn't be any connecton, the varied scoring seems to have added interest to the field goal in college circles.

Auburn was almost beaten by Florida via a field goal just a few days back. The pros, of course, have long recognized the value of the field goal but college elevens have been slow to take to the three-pointer.

Maybe the college boys will soon be duplicating the feats of the pros in this category. Alabama kicked one against LSU, Minnesota scored one against powerful Northwestern, Illinois tallied one against Michigan State, Wisconsin likewise Michigan State, Florida against Auburn and Georgia Tech beat Duke with one in the last quarter — the fifth tried by Tech in the game!

The Appomattox Town Council will meet on Monday night, at 7:30, at the Town Office.
